

Woodlands Culture Area Map

The Woodlands Culture Area spanned west to the Mississippi River and east to the Atlantic Ocean. It stretched north into Canada and south to the Gulf of Mexico. The Great Lakes region, specifically Illinois, fell into this area. Native people here travelled seasonally to hunt, fish, and gather wild foods. They also planted the so-called Three Sisters—corns, beans, and squash. In addition, many grew tobacco as a sacred crop.

There were two major subdivisions in this large area due to climate, the Northern and Southern Woodlands. While the people had similarities, it is important to recognize that, at the time of European contact, there were at least 40 different nations in the northeast, and 30 in the southeast. Each nation had individual differences based on their history and cultural traditions. For example, most spoke Algonquin languages, but some did not.

Using the following learning objectives and activities tied to them, this section explores Woodlands cultural artifacts to understand both the similarities and differences between tribal nations.

Learning Objective 1: Native people met their fundamental, basic survival needs for food, houses, clothes, and transportation by using the resources available to them in their environment.

Learning Objective 2: When Europeans arrived, new resources from another part of the world became available to Native people and altered their ways of life.

STUDENT WORKSHEET BEFORE VISITING THE MUSEUM

Pre-teach: The Woodlands Culture Area was very large, covering most of what today is the eastern part of the United States. It was populated by many tribes. Introduce the students to some of these tribes by having them study the Woodlands Map on page 1. The area is divided into the Northern Woodlands and the Southern Woodlands.

Activity: Using the Woodlands map, identify the section where each tribe lived by writing the proper word, Northern or Southern in the blank below each tribal name.

STUDENT WORKSHEET BEFORE VISITING THE MUSEUM

Learning Objective 1: Native people met their fundamental, basic survival needs for food, houses, clothes, and transportation by using the resources available to them in their environment.

Read: By the beginning of the 19th century the Potawatomi occupied country around the head of Lake Michigan from the Milwaukee River in Wisconsin to the Grand River in Michigan and extending southwest over a large part of northern Illinois, east across Michigan to Lake Erie and south into Indiana. Within this territory they had about 50 villages. These tribes lived sustainably. They grew their own crops including beans, squash, and tobacco. The men hunted following their belief of killing wild game only when there was a need. Animals were used for food, clothing, shelter and utensils.

1. What do you see as evidence that the Indians were self-sufficient? Make a list of the items that the people would have had to make themselves to survive.

B. Artifact Story: Pick an artifact that you like. Imagine you are a Woodlands man, woman, or child and create a story to tell about what you needed to do to make it. Then tell what you did with it. For example, fishing lure—“I went to find a good piece of wood to carve. Then I carved it into a fish shape. I got plants to make paints and painted it. I used strong plant material to make a fishing line. Then I went to a river to fish. ”

STUDENT WORKSHEET AFTER VISITING THE MUSEUM

Learning Objective 2: When Europeans arrived, new resources from another part of the world became available to Native people and altered their ways of life.

During your visit to the museum, you learned that the lifestyle of Northern Woodlands people changed when they began trading with the Europeans. The fur trade began in Canada when the French offered Indians kettles, knives and other gifts to establish friendship. In turn, the Indians gave animal pelts to the French. By the late 1500s, a great demand for fur, in particular beaver fur to make felt hats, had developed in Europe. The Native people hunted the beaver, trading the pelts for manufactured goods such as clothing, blankets, pots, and guns. In the fall, the French would supply these goods to Indians. Then they would collect beaver furs in the spring from them. Because of this arrangement, the Indians became indebted to the Europeans.

Activity: Consider the beliefs and practices of the Indians. Use the Woodlands Mural on page 2 to remind you of the ways Indians lived before the arrival of Europeans.

1. Explain how the fur trade worked.

2. How did the fur trade affect the self-sufficient lifestyle of the Northern Woodlands people?
